Translated from a paper received by the Cabot, capt. Compton, from Embden.

HAGUE, October 4.

There are no further news from Alkmaar, of the action of the 2d, but from Amsterdam they write yesterday:

"This day we know as little as yesterday evening of the action of yesterday, which is said to be renewed; the magistrates of the city have not yet published any thing But in a letter from Alkmaar of Thursday morning, they write as follows:

"The action of yesterday was most bloody, and lasted till 6 o'clock in the evening, The English had advanced to Hoof, but were repulsed to Bergen. The attack was made on all sides of our left wing, and many places suffered.

Another letter from Amsterdam says, "On the 2d was a violent action; the English had penetrated to Egmont, but in the night the French retook that place, and recovered their former position. The village Koedyck, half a league from Alkmaar, was burnt, and this day, the 3d, the battle recommenced, but we are ignorant of the result. Russian and English prisoners were brought to Haarlem, and no less than forty or fifty vessels arrived with wounded."

It is also known sufficiently well, that the Lemmer is taken by the English, but that a party headed by the commandant of Leerewarden had marched from that city to endeavor to regain the Lemmer—the result is not known. We have also advice, that a number of British armed vessels, frigates and others, cruise in the Zuyder Sea, and have already taken several vessels.

Since 30th September, about 2,200 French troops marched through this city to join the army.

Arrived, brig Betsey, captain Egbert Van Beuren, 117 days from Batavia—coffee.

The Betsey left no American vessels at Batavia—sailed thence on the 26 July in company with the ship Pennsylvania, captain York, of Philadelphia, and parted from her on the 27th, off the Straits of Sunda.

The ship Jane, of Philadelphia, for Canton, passed through the Straits, about the 20th July.

Four French vessels of war were expected at Batavia in August or September which will doubtless unite to annoy Americans in those seas; as a declaration of war had been formally made at the Isle of France, against America.

The English no longer cruise round the Isle of France, which leaves that nest of pirates at liberty.

Three of the people of the ship Pacific of New London, capt. Ingraham, which was captured by a French letter of marque of 20 guns, in the bay of Bengal in March last, have came home in the Betsey. The Pacific was chased on shore by an English man of war, on the 4th May, on the isle of France, and being abandoned by the French, the greater part of her cargo was taken out by the English, and she was then set on fire

The Dutch government at Batavia, shews the most friendly conduct to Americans, which was evinced by their allowing the Betsy to arm without any restriction.

Coffee was so plenty that they had not warehouses to store it in.

The Betsy touched at the Cape of Good Hope on her way home: Left there the ship Atlantic, captain Waters, of Philadelphia, of 16 guns, last from Madeira, bound to Bengal, had put in for water, would sail the 21st September.

THE LAY PREACHER.

"And David sent and communed with Abigail, to take her to him to wife."

THERE is something peculiarly grateful, to a person of unvitiated taste, in that prevail, in the manners of every people, during the earlier stages of their progress, from savage barbarism, to luxurious and fastidious refinement In such a state of society, a certain honest frankness and manly sincerity characterize the actions of every class and degree of men, from the cottage to the throne.

This frankness and simplicity are strikingly exemplified in the interesting story from which I have selected the passage which is prefixed to this discourse. The persons whose characters are exhibited in the narrative, are not of the "baser sort," the clownish and the ignorant; but of the great and honorable of the earth. One is the valiant and courtly David, the anointed King of Israel; the other, the wife—afterwards the widow of Nabal, who "was very great," and possessed extensive wealth.

To trace the conduct of such personages, "in the affairs of love," and from that conduct, to bring out to view the sentiments and emotions of the heart, cannot but be an instructive as well as interesting investigation. On the part of Abigail, there will be found no vanity, no coquetry, no affected reluctance, no pretences of being over persuaded to an unwilling compliance with what she sincerely and very honorably wished, in her heart:—and on the part of David, nothing rapturous, nothing puerile, obsequious or degrading to the dignity of a man, or which ought to make one "blush and hang his head to think himself a man." The whole appears like the transaction of honest people, engaged in honest business, which stands in no need of the flimsy veil of affected shyness, shame-facedness, or prudish reserve.

We are informed, by the penman of this part of oriental history, that David was, at this time, exiled from the court, and, with a few followers who faithfully adhered to his interest, was avoiding the persecuting hand of Saul. During the time that he lodged in the mountains and strong holds in the wilderness, it seems he had been somewhat civil to "the young men" of Nabal, who were the keepers of his sheep;—not having forgotten, probably, though now the Lord's anoint'd over a great nation, that he had once been a keeper of sheep himself. Having heard, therefore, that Nabal had a shearing, which, in those pastoral times, was reckoned "a good day," he very good-naturedly sends his compliments to Nabal, with orders to say to him, in David's name, "Peace be both to thee, and peace be to thine house, and peace be unto all that thou hast. And now I have heard that thou hast shearers. Now thy shepherds, which were with us, hurt them not, neither was there aught missing unto them, all the while they were in Carmel. Ask thy young men, and they will shew thee: Wherefore let the young men find favor in thine eyes, for we come in a good day; give, I pray thee, whatsoever cometh to thine hand, unto thy servants and to thy son David."—But Nabal, it seems, took it into his head to know nothing about this David, and treated his servants so cavalierly that they returned with much less good humor than they had come; and, at their arrival, induced David "to gird on his sword" and with about four hundred of his followers, to go and attempt to introduce himself to the haughty Nabal. But on his way he found himself unexpectedly introduced to a much more agreeable person. For, during these transactions, a servant had informed Abigail, that David had sent messengers to salute his master, and that he had railed on them; notwithstanding, said he, "The men were very good unto us as long as we were conversant with them. They were a wall unto us, both by night and by day, all the while we were with them, keeping the sheep."

Abigail, hearing this and concluding that David would not patiently bear such indignity, "made haste and took two hundred loaves, and two bottles of wine, and five sheep ready dressed, and five measures of parched corn, and a hundred clusters of raisins, and laid them on asses," and without mentioning the matter to Nabal, set out in person, attended by her servants, to meet the mighty David, who was advancing, arrayed in vengeance, against Nabal and his household. But, he is at once disarmed, and diverted from his purpose. Abigail, clothed in more resistless armour than his own, for "she was a woman of good understanding, and of a beautiful countenance," meets the enraged warrior, and throwing herself at his feet, beseeches him, with pleasant words, that the presents which she had brought might be "given to the young men who followed him," and that he would with hold his hand from avenging the injury which he had received.

The effect, upon David, was precisely such as might be expected from the intercession of a "woman of good understanding," upon the mind of an ingenuous, virtuous, and noble spirited man. In admiration of her munificence and of the amiableness of her disposition, the subdued chieftain exclaims: "Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, who hath sent thee, this day, to meet me; and blessed be thy advice, and blessed be thou, who hast kept me, this day, from coming to shed blood and from avenging myself with mine own hand."

From this moment, it is plainly perceptible, that the soul of David was knit with the soul of Abigail, in a virtuous and manly affection. Nor is it strange that it should be so:—There is no necessity of resorting to the romantic and poisonous notions of involuntary passion, to account for the fact. The character and conduct of Abigail were such, as, in their nature, are irresistible, and can never fail to engage the hrart of every man whose love is worth possessing.—"Kindness in women—not their beauteous looks shall win my love;" is the literal translation of David's actions, and is the maxim which every person of "good manhood," lays down as a rule for the direction and regulation of his affections.

As soon as Nabal was made acquainted with these transactions, and was informed of the vengeance which had so nearly overtaken him, in consequence of his churlishness and brutality, "his heart died within him"—he fell into a state of melancholy dejection, which, in the course of a few days, put a period to his life. When David heard of this event, being fully apprized of the estimable qualities of Abigail, having himself witnessed the conjugal fidelity which she had manifested to her former husband, notwithstanding he was "such a churlish son of Belial that a man could not speak to him," he felt all the power of her charms, and immediately "sent and communed with Abigail to take her to him to wife." And when David's servants had arrived and explained their errand, "Abigail hasted and arose and rode upon an ass with five damsels of hers that went after her; and she went after the messengers of David and became his wife."

This was, indeed, rather a summary method of concluding a match; but, since the parties were previously, well acquainted, it was also evidential of a sincere and affectionate heart, on the part of the suitor.—It shews that he did not wish, like "many a duteous knave, who, trimm'd in forms and visages of duty, keep yet their hearts attending on themselves," to make an ostentatious parade of an "obsequious bondage" which he would never own, and "talk of raptures which he never knew." On the contrary, he addresses her with a manly familiarity which compliments her understanding, without descending to that fawning servility, which may display, indeed, the gallantry of a beau, but never, the affection of a lover;—a gallantry which is practised for nothing but to be seen of women, and is supremely despised by such as have good sense enough to discern the source from which it springs.

On the part of Abigail, we are furnished with fresh proof, that she was in reality, such as she has been described—"a woman of a good understanding." Had it been otherwise, she would have been unable to distinguish the lover and the man of worth, thro' that plainness and simplicity, which a woman of a weak mind would have mistaken for rudeness and disrespect. She would have thought it incumbent on her to humble the arrogance of a man who could presume so fast upon her good opinion, and to bring him to his proper place at her feet, to beg, as a favor, that which he seemed so ready to claim as a right; not once reflecting that if he should prove to be a man of sense, he would despise and abandon her, and if a fool, he would eventually repay, with sullenness and abuse, the superciliousness with which she had treated him. Every man who, by cultivating his mind and improving his heart, has rendered himself worthy the affection of a woman of good understanding, feels it incumbent on him to establish and support a dignified and manly character, and reasonably expects, in that way, to secure the approbation, and esteem even of women as well as men. If he fails in this he must be expected to retire in disgust, and not to degrade himself to the despicable condition of a simpering, fawning sycophant—a mere lady's convenience; for he knows too well, that though in that situation, she may familiarly caress and fondle him, her fondness is precisely in kind with that which she bestows upon her favorite monkey, with which, no portion of esteem and, consequently, of genuine love can possibly be intermixed. If, therefore, he is brought to this touch stone, he will be sure to leave her to the advances of those "fellows of infinite tongue, who can rhyme themselves into ladies' favors." He will withdraw his affection from any woman, whom he cannot regard with esteem and deference, and from whom he cannot expect a reciprocation of the same sentiments and emotions. Two things will be carefully avoided by women who would have the attention of men of sense and independent character. One is, too great formality and reservedness, which indicate a cold and insusceptible heart; and the other a too frivolous and childish familiarity which is incompatible with a deference due to a person who is fit for a companion for life. As soon as a man perceives himself to be made the repository of a lady's little secrets, partaker of her trivial amusements, and unguarded prattle, he may set it down, that she unquestionally esteems him for nothing else.

To come to "a conclusion of the whole matter;" is it not true that many women, in these latter days, who, in most respects, are "all that the heart can desire, or that the eye look for in woman," deprive themselves of the attention of sensible men, by assuming a disdainful and supercilious behavior, and requiring a more servile submission than "a man of plain and uncoined constancy—that cannot look greenly and gasp out his eloquence" in fulsome adulation, either can, or ought to submit to? "My sisters these things ought not so to be."

The Lay Preacher of Pennsylvania.

As a model of true greatness, real dignity and real independence, the character of the Emperor Paul, may with advantage be set in opposition to that of any monarch or any potentate, which any age, or any nation has produced. Such greatness is very characteristically expressed by the Greek derivative Autocracy, which is far preferable even to aristocracy, maigré the derivation of the latter term.

Russia, from extreme insignificence and barbarism, has in less than a Century, risen to splendor, empire, and refinement But the means by which it rose, were not calculations on plausible appearances of probabilities not by turning round its unwritten laws, like George Fox, into the place of the smitten one, with the insensibility of a Chinese mandarin; not by contenting itself with an expression of the warmest sensibility on the occasion; not by pretending to be the freest and most enlightened nation upon earth; not by appointing foreigners, outlaws, swindlers, thieves, and drunkards to be governors of provinces and legislators; nor by staining its national faith, by deeds worthy to be enregistered on the records of the damned—as France has done.

One cannot wonder at that practice (copied from the French regicides) of shaving the head, and putting on an ill-favored scalp, when it is recollected, that it is the Fashion, and that the nobles of Kamschatka, do, under the same wise impulse, bear on their heads a sugar-loaf of cow-dung.

TRUE AMERICANISM.

It is related of some country curate, that preaching several sermons from one text, he prefaced each succeeding discourse to the first by these words, "come, let's have t'other whet at the woman of Samaria." So, I, bored unceasingly, by the perpetual recurrence of the nauseating theme, am nevertheless obliged to take another whet at True Americanism. True Americanism (I repeat the jargon with pain) tells us, in defence of the New Pacific School of Politics, that America ought to assume the attitude of a truly great, dignified and independent nation; and this, they contend can only be done by, not merely keeping aloof from, but hating, with a most virtuous hatred, totum terrarum orbem— the whole world. It is curious to view the composure with which they gather for us the first fruits of this new and profound policy.

"Americans! poor devils! how you are whipped and scourged," says one of the sapient tribe: "first France whipped you, for your predilection in favor of England; and now England whips you for your predilection in favor of France." Thus our dignified, independent and truly great nation, is allegorized by this fellow, under the figure of a baby, whose bottom is relentlessly scourged by certain cruel ones, whom it hath disturbed by its bawling.

But here follows the very pink of True Americanism.

From John Russell's Gazette! "British, French, and Dutch, in fact, every power that holds any command on the ocean has a blow at us—Our captains are flogged, seamen impressed, whole crews murdered, [Diavolo!] AND vessels and cargoes sold under the slightest pretexts imaginable." That whole crews should be murdered, under the slightest pretexts imaginable, is too bad; but that vessels and cargoes should be sold under the slightest pretexts imaginable, is a circumstance that defies even the verbosity of the English language, for adequate expressions of rage. "These proceedings are more atrocious than we could expect from the powers of Barbary;" and yet these True Americans advocate the act of prostrating the country before the authors of them, and preach up Peace as the means of avoiding their continuance. "Their aim is plunder; but these civilized nations who are bound by treaties to respect our flag, when in the prosecution of an honest trade;" bound by treaties! that with France, in the depth of our wisdom, has long been put an end to; and the British treaty was never calculated upon by the True Americans to produce any good: therefore, this pretence is idle—tho' I suspect, it does nevertheless protect all our vessels concerned in the prosecution of an honest trade. "Who have made professions of the sincerest friendship for our nation;" as to Great-Britain, she never made any at all; and tho' France has, all True Americans [illegible] to repeat that national friendship is a mere flam, a thing never to be relied on: how ridiculously do men give the lie to their own pretended faith! "The day of Justice, [always praying for justice, which must blast them] we trust, it is not far distant; when the voice of our nation, speaking through the organ of the Executive, will demand an explanation for such conduct." This demanding of an explanation, seems in True American eyes, the highest pitch of American repulsiveness. We have already demanded and received an explanation from France; and her explanation and her ultimatum are known to the world. What this man trusts in for any further explanation, I am at a loss to divine, as a far different speculation has been resolved on and pursued, with the applause of all his associates.

Thus, while the dignity, independence and true greatness of America, are, with so much affected purity and patriotism, expatiated upon; and a cold, haughty, distant indifference and suspicion recommended as a means of fostering these qualities, we find, from the confession of even those who recommend these means that they produce nothing but contempt—stripes—scourgings—executions: to picture these consequences in their own language, "whole crews are murdered, by British, French, and Dutch, in fact, by every power that holds any command on the Ocean, and vessels and cargoes sold, under the slightest pretexts imaginable." Vive l'éco'e nouvelle!!!

BUONAPARTE.

"Captain Farrell, arrived at New York from St. Lucar, says that by the last advices received from Egypt, Buonaparte had fallen a victim to the treachery of the natives, and the fragments of his army were put to the sword." If this news be true, the fall of this bloody freebooter proclaims its peculiar and distinctive justice. Buonaparte a victim to treachery! The monster then has met with his equal. It was by treachery he obtained the strong fortresses in Piedmont—by treachery he over ran Italy—by treachery he deceived the Pope—by treachery he overturned the republic of Venice—by treachery he expected to have conquered Egypt and Palestine—and by superior treachery the monster has at length been slain!—How many striking proofs of a SUPREME PROVIDENCE have we beheld, in the exemplary punishment of some of the most distinguished heroes of the French Revolution—cut off by superior dexterity in the very crimes for which themselves were the most infamous!

"That measure that thou meteſt to others shall be meted to thee again."

This is a law of the highest authority, and although the French atheists have excluded its divine author from their religion, he still watches all their movements, and marks all their crimes; and their punishment is often distinguished by such strong and appropriate characters, that "he that runs may read."

Buonaparte is acting the Pantomime of Harlequin in Egypt. The flying leaps which he there takes, are not however, into nunneries, but over sands, which threaten to warm his ardent courage to exhaustion.

The following lines, from the Aurora, have the merit of smooth and harmonious versification: I think they are from the pen of some gentleman decayed into a Democrat.

"The man, who has for British gold,
His press, himself, and country sold,
His PATRON'S POW'R may brave;
In vain his FELLOW MEN may blame,
Not all their efforts can reclaim

A Boston writer remarks that "the reasons for the mission to France, are not yet given to the public." He seems inclined to say, with Shakspeare, "Come, Jack, your reasons, Jack."

Every person who has at any time ventured upon an expression unfriendly to the Berlin School of Politics, has been stigmatized with abusing the President, meanwhile, the charge of abuse, rests with propriety on those stupid, ignorant men alone, who have attempted to set up defences. The last of these, exceeds, not only in stupidity, but in the grossly shallow and contemptible policy, which he imputes to the President: all his illustrious compeers; this is the sum and substance of his defence.

"The plan, I think, will be clearly made to appear by what is herein disclosed; to be, For the Directory, previous to the adjournment of Congress to request a renewal of the negociation at Paris, and to give the assurances required by the President, in rather an indirect manner with the view that he should not consider them satisfactory, and decline another embassy. Then, immediately upon the dissolution of Congress to send an Envoy Extraordinary to Philadelphia, to tell the story of our Governments rejecting the advances of France, and to solicit a hearing on all subjects of dispute."

This writer is insulting enough to the President, to suppose, that he altered the whole policy of this country, merely to evade a French trick! Suppose an Envoy extraordinary had come to Philadelphia, we might have thrown the fellow into the Delaware, or done any thing else with him that we chose; for the spirit of the nation was up, and nothing could have been more desirable than such an event, the effect of which could only have been, to animate to a still higher pitch, that virtuous and noble rage, which is now negociated to sleep.

The following Paragraph is copied from the Philadelphia Gazette: I could adduce an hundred others, of the same tenor, on the same occasion, from the Columbian and Massachusetts Centinel Federalist, the Farmer's Weekly Museum, the Daily Advertiser of Mr. Claypoole, &c. &c. &c. in all of which papers the attributes of "wisdom firmness, and magnanimity," do since precede the mention of this embassy, as naturally as an horse and two oxen do a New England cart.

"It is now asserted, upon authority next to official, that orders have been received by the Envoys to France, suspending the time at which they were to have embarked this from country. The present state of France indeed, affords but little hope that the meditated mission would be attended with any consequences other than disappointment and disgrace. The influence of the Jacobins, the haughty and dictatorial stile of the different organized societies in their addresses to the Councils themselves, all indicate the approach of a crisis, that will leave a fresh blot on the blood-stained annals of the French Republic. Threatened, as she is, by internal convulsions, and menaced by the rapid approaches of a formidable coalition, it will not be deemed irrational to predict, that the revolution, which began in the blood of innocence, will terminate its mad career at the shrine of insulted virtue, amidst the United hozannas of surrounding nations.

In this state of affairs, with whom shall we treat? Under every view of the subject the present moment is most inauspicious for negociation,"

I have cited the above facts solely as evidences of the abject servility of the American press, and further, as a proof, that it is not, even in the slightest degree, a medium of the public sentiment. Can there be wanting more positive proof, that the very men now loudest in their approbation of the President's policy in making peace with France, would have vented the same brutum fulmen of applause, had the very opposite course been pursued?

The Editors of the Aurora advertise to sell a splendid collection of the Latin classics, unique in this country. The sagacious news mongers of New York have employed their redundant wit, upon an expression in a Philadelphia paper, importing that Philadelphia was to be launched into the Delaware. There must needs be a little sense launched into their brains, before any of their sterile humour will pass.

It is a Chain Pump, operating by a crank and wheels, so that one man can raise as much water as ten men with a common chain pump. It is very simple in its construction, and will evade all the casualties that are likely to occur at Sea. The Boxes are of a peculiar fabric of brass; without any leather, or materials subject to decay: the machine will occupy as little room as two common pumps. This machine was invented by Mr. John Stickney of Boston, who has received a patent from the government of the United States.

DR. ANDREWS
Proposes to receive a few Private Pupils to be instructed in the rudiments of
THE LATIN LANGUAGE.

HE confines himself to beginners; because he would not incur the danger of having many Classes, or being obliged to build on an insufficient foundation.

And as he will require their attendance but two hours in the day (from eleven o'clock in the forenoon, to one); there will be no need of removing them from the schools to which they have hitherto gone, or may be intended to be sent, for their improvement in reading, writing, ciphering, and other useful branches of literature, not usually taught in a Latin school.

A COMPENDIOUS SYSTEM

Of Practical Surveying and dividing of land; briefly comprized under the following heads, viz.

TWENTY-THREE Geometrical Definitions, eleven Geometrical Positions, exhibiting to view the properties and dependencies of triangles; followed by problems and examples preparatory to Trigonometry, heights and distances. Then fifteen problems and examples neceſſarily previous to calculating a Survey ſucceeded by ſeven ſurveys, the area of the four firſt is found geometrically, and of the whole number by difference of latitude and departure, ſhewing how to take an inacceſſible boundary, find the bearing and diſtance of the cloſing line without running it, alſo the diſtances to an inacceſſible corner from the two adjacent corners, followed by examples of offſets on to winding ſtreams of water, ſhewing how to aſcertain the area without the trouble of meaſuring the windings with chains and inſtruments—a crooked water courſe ſtraitened, and a quantity of land on each ſide found by theſe offſets.

Ten examples of dividing land, with many ſub-diviſions, leading into the moſt critical circumſtances that can occur in practice; an example of Interſections, and an example ſhewing how the bearings of a field may be truly taken where the needle is attracted, altho' the attraction may vary in quantity and denomination at every ſtation; examples ſhewing the method of meaſuring by the chain only. All the rules are clear and explicit. This work contains the tables of difference of latitude and departure and of logarithms.

Orders ſent to Joſeph and James Cruckſhank, Bookſellers, No. 8, High-ſtreet, Philadelphia, Bonſall and Niles, 173, Market Street, Baltimore, or the Subſcriber in Wilmington (Del.) will be duly attended to.

Each volume will contain above 500 pages, neatly bound and lettered.

Uniformity in ſize, paper, and binding, will be obſerved throughout the work; ſo that, while the ſubſcribers become poſſeſſed of a valuable record, an ornament may be added to their libraries.

The price to ſubſcribers will be 2 dolls. 75 cts. per volume, in boards, and 3 dolls. whole bound, but, as the publiſher does not intend to print manmore than the number ſubſcribed for, a conſiderable riſe on the price may be expected to non-ſubſcribers.

Each volume will contain about one third leſs of letter-preſs than the original edition; but, as the publiſher is not yet enabled to determine the extent of the Private Journals, which he may be allowed to make public, he cannot aſcertain the number of volumes which will compriſe the work.

☞ Payments to be made on delivery of each volume.

Subſcribers will have it at their option, either to ſubſcribe for the whole of the Journals, up to the preſent time, or to thoſe only of the Old Congreſs prior to the organization of the Federal Government.

IN all countries, the proceedings in the commencement of their governments, are loſt in darkneſs and obſcurity, owing to a careleſsneſs, in the ſucceeding generation, to preſerve the public records, and the attention of the nation, in theſe rude ages, being called off from their domeſtic concerns, to engage in wars and conqueſt. Of what infinite value would the laws of Alfred be, had they been tranſmitted to our days? Time, that deſtroys every thing, enhances the value of well authenticated public records, and renders them almoſt inеſtimable. It is hoped, that Americans will, therefore, chearfully contribute their aſſiſtance in tranſmitting to poſterity the labours of their anceſtors—founders of the Columbian nation.

 The work will certainly be advanced with expedition and promptitude. The following will ſhow the ſupport it has already acquired:

"Reſpectfully ſheweth,

"That having, in our reſpective avocations, frequent occaſions to recur to the Journals of Congreſs, we experience inconvenience by the ſcarcity of them: That we underſtand that Richard Folwell, printer, of Philadelphia, has had it in contemplation to print that public record; and that he hath obtained partial countenance from many individuals; but that he has delayed proſecuting the work, in expectation of encouragement from government, that may adequately indemniſy him. We, therefore, reſpectfully ſolicit, as the publication is neceſſary to be diſſeminated among public bodies, that Congreſs will, in their wiſdom render him ſuch additional encouragement, to that which he has obtained from private individuals, as to enable him to proceed with the work, ſo that your Memorialiſts may be enabled to purchaſe copies of that record for themſelves.

The Swift-Sure,

A NEW LINE OF STAGES,

NOW RUNNING BETWEEN

PHILADELPHIA & NEW-YORK,

By the ſhort and pleaſant road of Buſſleton, Newtown, Scotch Plains, Springfield and Newark.

THE excellence of this road, the populouſneſs of the country through which it paſſes, with ſundry other advantages, which render it ſo far preferable to the Old Road through Briſtol, Brunſwick, &c. long ago ſuggeſted the propriety of its becoming the Grand Thorough Fare from Philadelphia to New York. During the preſent year, a minute ſurvey of it has been taken, and its ſuperiority over the Old Road, both in winter and ſummer, has been clearly aſcertained.—There are good bridges over all the other waters but the Delaware, and here the croſſing is performed with great ſafety and in leſs than half the time required at the Trenton Ferry. The road is ſeveral miles ſhorter than the old road, but this is amongſt the leaſt of its advantages, becauſe daily experience proves to us, that diſpatch as well as comfort in travelling principally depend on the goodneſs of the road and the levelneſs of the country, and, in theſe reſpects, the New Road is, beyond all compariſon, the beſt. It preſents none of thoſe rocky hills, which render the Old Road ſo fatiguing between the Delaware and Newark. The ſoil, too, for the greater part, is ſuch as to produce but little mud in winter, and very little duſt in ſummer, which circumſtance, added to the beauty of the country, and a conſiderable proportion of ſhade, muſt always render travelling in the latter ſeaſon peculiarly agreeable.

The Swift Sure ſtarts from PHILADELPHIA, at 6 o'clock every morning (Sundays excepted) from the GREEN TREE, oppoſite the Lutheran Church, North Fourth ſtreet. It goes through Frankford to Buſtleton, where it ſtops to Breakfaſt; from Buſtletown it goes through Newtown to Penny-town to dinner; from Penny-town through Hopewell, Millſtone, Bound-brook, Quibbletown and Plainfield to Scotch Plains to lodge. The next morning it ſtops at Springfield to breakfaſt, from whence it goes through Newark and arrives at New-York at noon.

From NEW-YORK it ſtarts at 3 o'clock in the afternoon (from Paulus Hook) and arrives at Philadelphia the next evening. For ſeats at New-York, application may be made to Edward Bardin, Old Coffee houſe, to A. Mathieu, corner of Naſſau and John ſtreets, to B. Many, no. 48, Courtlandt, corner of Greenwich ſtreet, and to Michael Little, at his hotel, no. 42, Broad ſtreet.

Fare for paſſengers, Five Dollars.
Way paſſengers 6 Cents per Mile.

Each paſſenger is allowed to take on 14lbs. of baggage carriage free; but all other baggage, taken on by a paſſenger, will be charged at 4 cents per pound weight.

With reſpect to packages ſent on without paſſengers, the proprietors preſume they have adopted a regulation, which, though unknown to other lines of ſtages, they think muſt meet with general approbation, They pledge themſelves to make good every package on the following conditions. The perſon who delivers the package at the office ſhall ſee it entered in the ſtage-book, for which entry he ſhall pay 6 cents; he will then ſtate the value of the package, and pay (excluſive of the carriage) one per cent. on the value, as inſurance, and for which he will receive a receipt. Thus, for inſtance, if he eſtimates his package at one dollar, he will pay one cent. and if at one hundred dollars, he will pay one dollar inſurance, and in like proportion for packages of any other value.

Very few perſons it is preſumed, will diſlike this regulation; it will however, be optionable with every one to avail himſelf of this ſecurity or not. But the proprietors think it right to ſtate very explicitly, that they will be reſponſible for the ſafe delivery of no package, which is not regularly entered, and for which an inſurance receipt cannot be produced.

In the diſtribution of the route, the greateſt care has bren taken to fix on ſuch places and taverns as always afford a good accommodation and entertainment for the paſſengers at the moſt reaſonable rates The ſtages are well equipped furniſhed with fleet and ſteady horſes, and committed to the care of intelligent ſober and obliging drivers. The proprietors themſelves live at the different towns and villages where the ſtages will ſtop, ſo that the conduct of the perſons they employ is continually an object of their attention.—They take care alſo to ſee that the paſſengers are well provided for and politely treated at the taverns, and that no ſort of chicanery or inſolence is practiſed upon them; in ſhort, they have ſpared neither pains nor expence to render the SWIFT-SURE the very beſt line of ſtages in America.

The line has now run nearly a month, during which time a great number of gentlemen have gone through, both from Philadelphia and New-York. Every paſſenger has found the road to ſurpaſs very far all that has been ſaid of its excellence; and the Proprietors of the Swift Sure are extremely happy to hear the behaviou of their drivers, and the treatment at Taverns ſpoken of with the higheſt ſatisfaction.
